A33276 2010a OCLC Number: (OCoLC)643053629 Excerpt: . . . 11 standardize, and streamline the way USDA food aid and domestic food purchases are managed end to end - from planning and procurement to ordering, contract management and delivery. The WBSCM Program Office is scheduled to start user acceptance testing this month. The Public Health Information System (PHIS) is an integrated, comprehensive system of web-based applications that will provide near real-time collection, report-ing, and analysis of food safety data and inspection findings for FSIS. PHIS modern design will provide the agency the ability to adapt as requirements change and evolve. It will replace many of FSIS legacy systems and will capture data on the findings of FSIS inspection program personnel as they perform their daily tasks (in-cluding import and export tasks) and utilize the data to analyze trends, produce automated model predictions, and ensure the datas quality to be comprehensive, timely, and reliable for decision-making. In addition, PHIS will collect inspection findings, such as humane handling information, entered by FSIS inspection program personnel, as well as data streams from the Agencys domestic and international partners. This coordinated effort, made possible through PHIS technology, will im-prove the agencys ability to collect, analyze, and communicate data, better predict likely outcomes, and improve protection of public health. PHIS will be hosted in USDA Enterprise Data Centers for maximum availability and disaster recovery. Currently, PHIS is in the design and development phase and technical testing and integration began this month. Targeted implementation is expected to begin in the fourth quarter of FY 2010. USDA is one of the largest producers and consumers...
