In a memorial from the civil engineers of the United States to the President, made 20 years ago, it was pointed out that: By the desultory and unsystematic methods of river and harbor improvements which have prevailed in this country up to this time, neither the harbors nor the rivers are at all adequate to the needs of commerce. The navigable waterways at present are in detached lengths, and not suited to economical transportation, and many are useless for a large part of the year. They should constitute connected systems, so planned as to avoid transshipments. The value of these commercial channels is gradually but surely impressing itself upon our people. All admit their cheapness for heavy traffic. The methods pursued in the prosecution of...
