Reviews

Comprehensive guide! Its this type of very good read through. It is actually writter in simple words and phrases rather than difficult to understand. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

Not illustrated. 1914 Excerpt: . is so overloaded with carving that its beauty is destroyed. These nights of excess, however, were rare, and most of his pieces, though more or less ornate, kept within the bounds of good taste. His most pleasing and graceful work is of the inexpensive type previously alluded to. It was, fortunately, only his wealthiest patrons who could afford to allow him free reign to indulge his bent for ingenious carving. The Chippendale imitators, for the most part, refrained from attempting the most elaborate type of work, and when they did their inability to manage proportion and detail at once betrayed their inferiority. Gilding was the next process to be considered after carving. The gilding was used, with very few exceptions, altogether for the embellishment of mirror frames. In comparatively rare instances it was used in conjunction with carving and applied to mahogany for purposes of extra enrichment. Lacqueb was also used to a slight extent, and that almost altogether in the Chinese style, for the embellishment of some of the furniture. There was not enough used, however, to affect seriously the generality of the statement that carving was the essentially popular Chippendale process of decoration. Fbetting or the use of fretwork was practised to a large extent for the adornment of table edges and the tops of cabinet work (Plates XIX, p. 174; XVII, p. 166; XV, p. 154). In such cases it was pierced. When used for the enrichment of table or chair legs...
