Examination showed he did not have it. We took X-rays of his teeth. Nothing showed. But he still persisted in the belief that that was his trouble. Finally we had a dentist come over from Walker and pull a sound tooth, and he recovered from his hip trouble. W. W. Smith, M. D. , Red Wing: I have been hoping to hear something of this kind; I have been hoping to put an X-ray outfit in this school. No one can practice medicine without the use of the X-ray, nor can dentistry be practiced without the use of the X-ray. It is absolutely necessary that some form of X-ray should be provided at the institution. In the Service everyone was convinced of its value. I should like to have Dr. Gardner express his opinion of the bedside units. After this discussion today I can see where the superintendents are going to be requested by the physicians and dentists to honor requisitions for an X-ray. I know one is going in from the Training School the present quarter. Dr. Gardner: We use four bedside units at present. These bedside units are put up by three or four different companies. The Dental Manufacturing Co. is coming out with a new one at the Boston meeting within two or three weeks. I believe the bedside unit will do good enough work from the dental standpoint, and it will also do the general bone work. Dr....
